I was born and raised in Marion, Alabama. I graduated from high school at Marion Military Institute in 1984. After attending two years at the University of South Alabama in Mobile, I completed my undergraduate degree in Education at Auburn University in 1988. In 1995, I completed my graduate studies at Troy State University in Counseling and Human Development. After teaching school for 12 years, I transitioned into school psychometry, testing students for special education services in the Dallas County School System for the last 20 years.

My husband of 26 years, Ira Wagoner, and I have two lovely daughters attending Troy University. Ira is an accountant and enjoys golf. I enjoy art. Together we love spending time with our family, including our beloved grandson, Wilks.
